TC faces multimillion-dollar deficit

President Russell: Tax base must be expanded or the college will not survive

By MARIE MARTIN
Texarkana Gazette

Texarkana College's financial position is so bad, last week would have been the last time TC would have made its $700,000 payroll if changes had not been made in June, officials said.

And the outlook remains bleak.

"I've been talking to a bank about securing a line of credit in case we need it," President James Henry Russell said Thursday. "Today would have been the last payroll."

The college has no debt. If credit is secured and used, it would be the first time the college has owed money in nearly two decades, according to records.

"About two or three years ago, we were the best, most well-funded government in this jurisdiction, and (now) we may be the first to go broke," board President Mike Sandefur said.

Auditors recently uncovered a host of financial problems at the college that may take months to sort out.

"It's not at the bottom yet," Russell said.

The audit of the 2010-11 fiscal year isn't complete, but college officials anticipate a nearly $8.5 million deficit. Nearly four months into the 2011-12 fiscal year, which ends Aug. 31, 2012, college leaders already project a deficit of at least $2.5 million to $3 million.

According to the 2009-10 audit, the college had about $5.3 million in asset losses. Combined with the projections for 2010-11 and 2011-12, Texarkana College could see a three-year financial decline of $16.3 million to $16.8 million.

With a bookkeeping system in disarray, the college is scrambling to make sense of the revenues and expenditures for the 2010-11 fiscal year, officials said. The exploration is also causing an re-examination of previous years.

"The books are almost un-auditable. They are in such bad shape," said Russell, adding that when a technology upgrade was made, records may not have been converted accurately.

Russell said when he came on board in June and saw the cash flow report, he realized the college was in trouble. Since the auditors have been on the campus, the depth of TC's financial woes has only gotten worse.

"The $22 million (reserve funds) is gone, and we have a structural problem with our funding. The money's gone. But even if we still had (the $22 million), we'd still be in an operational deficit because the funding model has a structural error in it."

The college had $22 million in reserves at the end of the 2007-08 school year. The reserves were a source of income for the college, earning about $1 million a year in interest.

The college's yearly budget is about $22 million.

In years past, the reserves were used for capital projects, emergencies and shoring up budget deficits that rarely exceeded $1 million.

The funding changes for community college and school districts began about five years ago, Russell said. Each year, legislators have been reducing the money allotted for Texas' 50 community colleges, forcing the

Texarkana College earns highest national honor

TC is one of only two community colleges to receive the award

Texarkana College received one of the top community college awards in the nation Tuesday, a recognition leaders say is hard proof of the changes they've made in the college and its culture of success.

Fifteen staff and faculty members are at the Gaylord Hotel in Nashville, Tenn., where they received one of only two prestigious 2018 Achieving the Dream Leah Meyer Austin Awards, the highest honor awarded to community colleges to recognize outstanding transformational change leading to student success and completion.

The ceremony was held on the first day of the annual Achieving the Dream conference, which will last for three days. This year's award is sponsored by the Kresge Foundation and is accompanied by a $25,000 prize. Odessa College is the other award recipient.

■ TC benefactor Ross Perot reflects on growing up in Texarkana

■ Ross Perot addresses Texarkana College students and faculty Thursday as he pledges a potential $4 million to the college over the next four years. Perot announced a $1 million donation to kick off the challenge.

By MARIE MARTIN ■ Texarkana Gazette

Hard work, charity, sacrifice and determination are just a few of the character precepts Ross Perot learned while growing up in Texarkana, Texas.

On Thursday, the billionaire visited Texarkana College after donating $1 million to the school and pledging another $4 million if the community met the match. During the 10,000 Tommorrow's event at the college, Perot spoke about his early years in Texarkana.

The future Texas industrialist was born June 27, 1930, in Texarkana.

"It was 126 degrees that day. No air conditioning, no nothing," Perot said. "My dad said, 'The devil had come up to see his handiwork.' My mother didn't think much of that."

Perot, who attended TC from 1947 to 1949, said during his formative years living on Olive Street, he was surrounded by good role models, primarily his parents.

He remembered learning about charity and tolerance from his mother's relationship with indigents who walked along 29th Street near his house during the Depression.

"They would come up and knock on the door looking for food. She would feed them with food we didn't really have or couldn't afford."

Later, the young Perot learned a mark was on the curb in front of his house, signaling a giving household.

"I said, 'Mother, do you want me wash that off?' She said, 'Son, no. These people are just like us. They are down on their luck, and we need to help them.' Isn't it wonderful to have parents that would raise you that way?"

One September, Perot said, he learned about kindness and

$5 MILLION PLEDGE

The details of the Perot Foundation's $5 million pledge to Texarkana College

FUNDING

The first million dollars are already in the college's bank.

The foundation will pay up to $1 million per year on Feb. 15 from 2013 to 2016 if the college collects matching funds.

Matching Fund Contributions mean all donations collected by the college from individuals, companies, foundations and any other nongovernmental source. The matching funds could include any incremental tax revenue generated for the college in the November taxing annexation election.

RESTRICTIONS

The purpose of the gift is to retain college faculty. The money will be used exclusively for salary, training and other benefits for faculty in academic positions.

RIGHT TO TERMINATE

If the foundation determines that funds provided are not being spent for the intended purpose, being spent inefficiently or the college is not making satisfactory progress in reaching its goals, the foundation may terminate its pledge for all future years without notice.
